A widely acknowledged classical musician of the North Indian genre, Partha Bose belongs to the great Maihar Gharana. He has an uncanny ability to communicate with listeners world-wide through his sitar. Credited with evolving a style which blends tradition with imagination, Partha seeks to touch the inner depths of a raga (melodic scale) and tala (rhythmic cycle) by fascinating improvisations. Sterling performances in Major Music Festivals in India and abroad as well as workshops and lecture-demonstrations for reputed universities over more than two decades have found him contributing substantially to the rising graph of Indian Culture and Music in the global Arena. Partha Bose visualizes music as a universal language which reminds us of our shared humanity.

A young tabla player of rare skill, Indranil Mallick has already established himself both as a soloist and accompanist. Born to a family of genuine music connoisseurs, he received his initial training in tabla when he was only five from his uncle, Sri Montu Mallick. Later he was trained by Dhabol Bandyapadhaya. From 1985 he was under the guidance of Sri Uttam Chakraborty, senior disciple of Pandit Swapan Chaudhuri. Now he is under the guidance of Pt. Swapan Chaudhuri. Indranil belongs to Lucknow Gharana style of tabla. Since 2002 Indranil is doing international touring. During these tours he represents India in many world renowned festivals.
